

Discussion Questions for Parents and Educators

Developed by Wendy L. Sellers, RN, MA, FASHA, CSE, alias The Puberty Lady

Parents and educators can use the following questions to help young people understand and discuss consent. Answers are provided to help guide and inform the conversation.

How can you tell if someone would like a kiss?

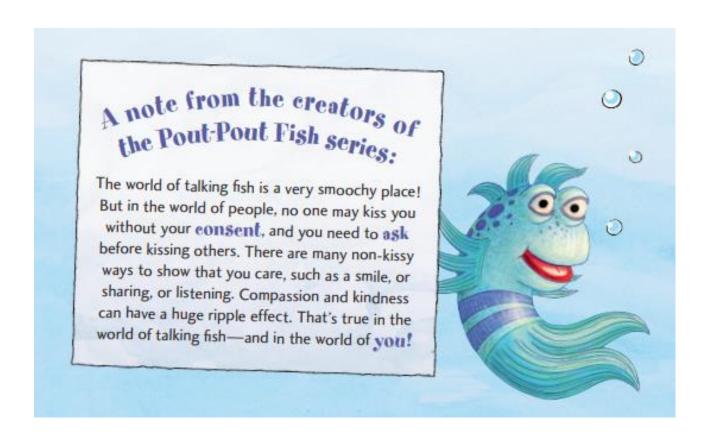

There are two ways you can tell if someone would like a kiss: 1) Ask them if they want a kiss. 2) Hear them ask for a kiss.

How can you show that you care about someone without kissing them?

Write them a note. Listen to their ideas and feelings. Offer to share an activity with them. Invite them to play with you. Smile at them. Ask them if they would like a hug. Sit beside them.

If someone kisses you when you do not want a kiss, what can you do?

Tell them to stop. Walk away. Tell a trusted adult.

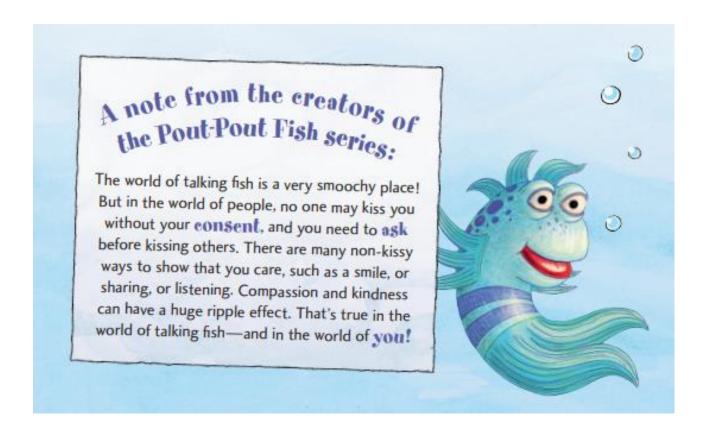

Discussion Questions

Developed by Wendy L. Sellers, RN, MA, FASHA, CSE

How can you tell if someone would like a kiss?

How can you show that you care about someone without kissing them?

If someone kisses you when you do not want a kiss, what can you do?

How can you tell if someone would like a kiss?

There are two ways you can tell if someone would like a kiss: 1) Ask them if they want a kiss. 2) Hear them ask for a kiss.

How can you show that you care about someone without kissing them?

Write them a note. Listen to their ideas and feelings. Offer to share an activity with them. Invite them to play with you. Smile at them. Ask them if they would like a hug. Sit beside them.

If someone kisses you when you do not want a kiss, what can you do?

Tell them to stop. Walk away. Tell a trusted adult.

About Wendy L. Sellers

The discussion questions featured in the handouts above were developed by Wendy L. Sellers, RN, MA, FASHA, CSE.

Wendy has been a passionate advocate for health promotion for students for more than 30 years.

She is the author of Puberty: The Wonder Years, a curriculum that provides skills-based and comprehensive sexuality education that starts early, involves parents, and meets students' needs.

She is also co-author of the nationally-recognized, evidence-based Michigan Model for Health, and has trained hundreds of educators across the country in its use.

For more information about her puberty education resources as well as her availability for presentations, visit Wendy's website at https://pubertycurriculum.com/.

Or contact Wendy at Wendy.Sellers@PubertyCurriculum.com or UGH-PUBERTY (844-782-3789).